FOREWORD

MANY young people are able to obtain a college education only because certain financial aids are available to them at the institutions of their choice. Many others are denied a college education because they do not know that financial assistance may be obtained through the colleges in the form of scholarships, prizes, and opportunities for self-help.

Hundreds of requests for such information come each year to the Department of Public Instruction, to public school administrators, and to guidance officers. The purpose of this bulletin, therefore, is to provide concise, accurate, and helpful information for all who are interested in the financial aids and opportunities for self-help obtainable under certain conditions while in attendance at accredited Pennsylvania colleges and universities.

The information contained in this bulletin should provide an incentive for further investigation on the part of prospective students and their parents.

For more complete information about tuition, scholarships, or opportunities for self-help at any specific institution of higher learning, requests should be addressed to the Registrar of that college or university.
